

Mentoring Program

The Melbourne Press Club has opened applications for its 2018/19 Mentoring Program. The initiative offers developing journalists the opportunity to learn from experienced colleagues in a 12-month program.

Unlike the in-house mentoring programs of the past, we connect mentees with senior colleagues from different media organisations. They have the opportunity to benefit from the insights, observations and wisdom offered by those experienced mentors.

“Now in its third season, our program offers great opportunities to build professional relationships that will help sustain quality journalism in an era of rapid change,” says MPC Chief Executive Mark Baker.

The program is open to journalists with up to seven years professional experience. Applicants must be current members of the Melbourne Press Club.
